Part One An Introduction of Shanghai

About Shanghai

Geographical Location

Shanghai, also called in short in Chinese "Hu" or "Shen", situated in the middle of China's east coastline, is a gate to the Changjiang River valley. Bordering on Jiangsu and Zhejiang provinces on the west, Shanghai is washed by the East China Sea on the east and Hangzhou Bay on the south. North of the city, the Yangtze River pours into the East China sea.

About Shanghai

Population

Shanghai has a permanent resident population of over 13.4 million, of which 9.18 million live in the urban areas.

The life expectancy of Shanghai residents has already reached the level of economically developed countries in the world. Today, the life expectancy of Shanghai residents is higher than the world's average and that of middle-income countries and reaches the level of major economically-developed countries in the world.

The Bund

Located near the confluence of the Huangpu River and Suzhou Creek, the Bund is famous for the multitude of colonial styles of architectures lining the street along the Huangpu River. The 52 buildings in the Bund represent different architectural styles, such as Gothic, Baroque, Roman, Renaissance, British, French and East Indian. Though they differ from each other, all these buildings achieve a harmonic outline when viewed as a whole.

The Oriental Pearl TV Tower

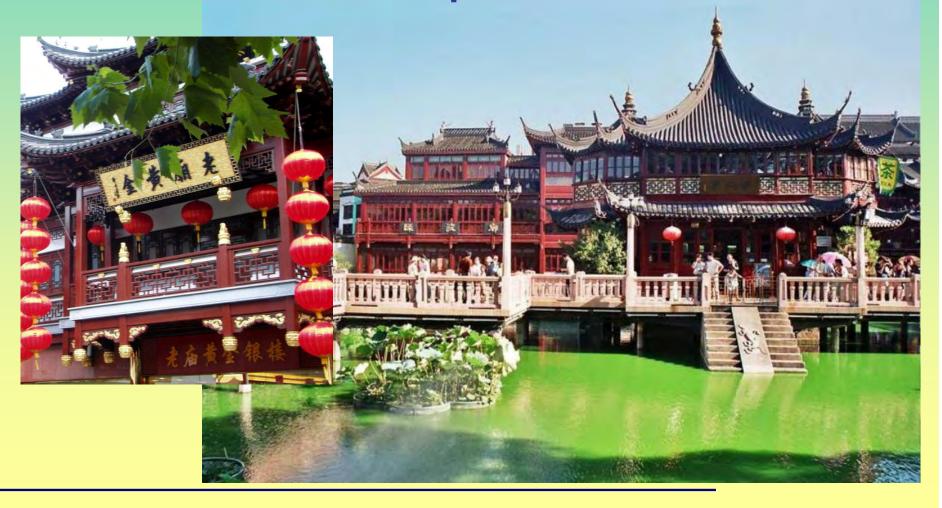

The Town God's Temple and Yu Yuan Garden

Xintiandi

Shanghai Xintiandi is a stylish pedestrian street composed of Shikumen architecture (literally Stone Street) and modern complex.

Cuisine in Shanghai

Shanghai, with so many business people rushing in, is not only China's economic and cultural center, but also a "Grand View Garden" for dinners of all tastes. Different styles of cuisine meet and merge in Shanghar only to create the so-called Shanghai style cuisine, influenced by Beijing cuisine, Yangzhou cuisine, Guangdong cuisine and Sichuan cuisine, together with the foods of Suzhou, Wuxi, Ningbo and Hangzhou flavors, making Shanghai an ideal gourmet kingdom".

Part Two An Introduction of SISU

About SISU

Shanghai International Studies University (SISU) was founded in December 1949 as the former Shanghai Russian College. It later was named the Shanghai Foreign Language Institute and became a national key university approved by the State Council in 1963. Approved by the Ministry of Education in 1994, it was officially renamed as "Shanghai International Studies University".

In the same year, it was listed as one of the first colleges and universities jointly supervised by the national Ministry of Education and the Municipality of Shanghai. In 1996, it passed the evaluation process of Project 211 directed by the Ministry of Education, and became one of the nation's "100 key universities for the 21st Century."

About SISU

Brief Introduction

Now, SISU has two campuses in Hongkou and Songjiang. The Hongkou campus is located in the center of Shanghai, covering 16.9 hectares with elegant surroundings. The Songjiang campus is in Shanghai's Songjiang New District, covering an area of 53.3 hectares, with a picturesque environment.

Brief Introduction

At present, SISU has a full-time enrollment of over 1,400 postgraduate students, 6,000 undergraduates, 800 college students, and 1,200 international students. There are also 25,000 other types of registered students in various programs.

SISU has a faculty with significant academic prestige and educational experience. The full-time teachers number more than 500, including more than 300 professors and associate professors as well as a group of young and middle-aged outstanding lecturers.

Research Centers, Institutes and Journals

- SISU has one national research center of humanities & social sciences (Middle Eastern Studies Institute), one undergraduate education base of non-universal languages (Italian, Portuguese and Greek), two national key programs (English and Russian), one national developing key program (Arabic), and two Shanghai key programs (Arabic and international relations).
- More than ten research institutes and academic groups have been established, including the Research Institute of International Relations and Foreign Affairs, Middle Eastern Studies Institute, Institute of Linguistic Studies, Institute of Literature Studies, the SISU Intercultural Institute, the America Research Center, Canada Research Center, German Region Research Center, New Zealand Research Center, etc.
- SISU also publishes many influential Chinese journals (listed in the CSSCI), including the Journal of Foreign Languages, Foreign Language World, International Observation, Arabic World Research, and Educational Technology for Foreign Language Teaching.

Exchange and Contributions

- Advocating international academic exchange and cooperation, SISU has entered into partnerships with more than 100 renowned universities in over 30 countries and regions. Quite a few foreign government leaders have visited SISU and many world celebrities are appointed as part-time professors. Every year, SISU sends its outstanding students to study abroad.
- Over the past sixty years since its establishment, SISU has turned out a great number of visionary and innovative professionals featuring both language proficiency and comprehensive skills. They are found all over the world. In the future, SISU is striving to become a high-level multidisciplinary international research and teaching foreign language university.
